FOREWORD

This document presents the results of an occupational analysis¹ focused on the profession of dance rehearsal director. The project was proposed and coordinated by the Conseil québécois des ressources humaines en culture (CQRHC), in collaboration with the Regroupement québécois de la danse (RQD), and received financial support from the Commission des partenaires du marché du travail (CPMT). The analysis was a follow-up to the Chart of Competencies for Dance Rehearsal Directors, developed out of meetings and discussions held during the Grands Chantiers de la danse professionnelle du Québec, in 2008. The Competency Profile meets Recommendation 26, which was unanimously adopted at the second États généraux de la danse on April 29, 2009.

During the work sessions that led to the creation of this Competency Profile, a committee of experts set out to provide a detailed description of their professional and personal skills. To do so, they referred to the Chart of Competencies for Dance Rehearsal Directors. In seeking to identify the subskills and important actions associated with each of the listed skills, they decided to restructure the areas of competence. In the end, the Chart was reorganized according to the content of the Competency Profile. Both documents now reflect the reality of a dance rehearsal director.

This competency profile takes into account the fact that the responsibilities and duties of a dance rehearsal director may vary according to his or her work context and environment. As a result, a person occupying this position is not necessarily required to carry out all of the tasks or to demonstrate all of the general competencies listed in this document. Dance rehearsal directors are often called upon to act as specialists. However, they also work closely with members of a company or creative team, which means that their tasks and workload can vary considerably.

THE JOB AND ITS TITLE

Practitioners occupying this position may often refer to themselves as répétiteurs, assistants or assistant choreographers, artistic consultants, the “outside eye” or dramaturgs. In 2008, with a view to creating a name that would encompass all the skills of an artist traditionally identified as a répétiteur, the title “dance rehearsal director” was adopted. The experts around the table considered the term “répétiteur”² to be outdated and inappropriate, given how the profession has evolved in recent years, and reductive, given the broad range of tasks to be carried out.

In choosing the term dance rehearsal director, the committee sought to underscore the significant responsibilities of the job in terms of managing human and artistic resources. It is important to note, however, that the new name is still a compromise, and that as far as recognition and credits are concerned, it is up to artists to negotiate their title, which may vary according to their skills, their preferred approach, the type of project they are collaborating on and the tasks they are assigned.

DANCE REHEARSAL DIRECTORS: ARTISTS FIRST AND FOREMOST

A dance rehearsal director is one of the links in the research-creation-production-presentation chain. His or her professional competencies are based on inherent artistic foundations that are essential for this profession. Those who hold this position should draw on all of their knowledge of dance and art in general. Their competency profile is therefore clearly that of an artist.

DANCE REHEARSAL DIRECTORS: COMMITTED TO THE INTEGRITY OF THE WORK

Depending on the projects in which they are involved, dance rehearsal directors can play a variety of roles in varying degrees, including those of spectator or privileged spectator, artistic consultant, teacher, coach, stage manager, intermediary and mediator. Regardless of their nature and scope, a dance rehearsal director's actions are, from an ethical and practical standpoint, based on a commitment to respect the integrity of the work.

TERMINOLOGY

Competency

As used in this analysis, competency refers to an individual's ability to demonstrate that s/he has the necessary knowledge, skills and attitudes to carry out a professional act or task that meets a pre-determined standard and/or other requirement.

Types of competency

There are two types of competency: professional and general. Professional competencies include the various tasks that a person in a particular profession, job or position should be able to carry out. General competencies are skills and abilities (traits, attitudes, moral qualities) that the practitioner or professional in question should have and demonstrate in order to carry out tasks and fulfil responsibilities. Each of the professional competencies identified in this document should be exercised according to applicable laws, regulations and standards.

Dancer/performer

The term "dancer/performer" refers to dancers and other artists (actors, musicians, visual artists) who perform during the process of creating and presenting a work.

IMPORTANT NOTE TO READERS

This study took into account the fact that the responsibilities and duties of a dance rehearsal director may vary according to his or her work context and environment. As a result, a person occupying this position is not necessarily required to carry out all of the tasks or to demonstrate all of the general competencies listed in this document.

USES OF THE DOCUMENT

The Competency Profile should be used in conjunction with the Chart of Competencies for Dance Rehearsal Directors. Both documents were created out of a desire and need to affirm the specificity of this role. Artists who practice this profession can refer to both documents in order to have their expertise recognized, as well as to evaluate their skills and determine areas where they could pursue additional training. For organizations devoted to developing dance, these documents are a useful tool to identify ongoing training needs and create a specialized education platform. For dance companies and those in charge of independent choreography projects or other artistic productions including dance, these documents can be a useful guide to hire specialists and write up contracts. Finally, during negotiations aimed at improving work conditions, the Competency Profile and Chart of Competencies for Dance Rehearsal Directors can serve as a reference tool and can help to determine the content of agreements among the parties concerned.

METHODOLOGY

The DACUM (Developing a Curriculum) method was chosen to conduct this occupational analysis. One of the key features of DACUM is to rely on a group of expert practitioners to review all of the competencies required to function effectively in a given occupation. The combined Chart of Competencies and Competency Profile present four levels of analysis:

1. A series of areas of competence. An area of competence is a major function or responsibility in a particular profession, trade or position. We have identified two such areas: areas of professional competence (see sections A to I) and areas of general competence (see section J).
2. Each area of competence is then broken down into skills (competencies). A competency statement, like the areas of competence, is defined in behavioural terms and starts with an action verb.
3. Each skill is further divided into subskills (see sections A to I) and main skills (see section J). A subskill is an intermediate step between the main skill and the detailed actions associated with practicing this skill.
4. A non-exhaustive list of important actions and general competencies may be used as performance indicators, providing criteria to assess competencies.
